Clarence Coleman Again.

BACOLOR, LUZON, P. I., Dec. 11.—It is no longer a novelty of being in the Philippines. If indeed, it ever was, for it seems that we have spent the greater part of our life over here among these half-savage, bare yellow-legged gags. Indeed it would be a most agreeable change to shift the scene, which by the way, will be made within the next six months. We have now been here at Bacolor nine long months with chances of being here some time longer. We are, however, no longer in charge of the town i. e. Co. K, we having been relieved five days ago of the charge of the town by Company B, 41st Infantry, from Guagua, which will do the town guard, scouting, etc. Our entire company is now on detached service. Our company (K) now constitutes the prison guard at the Bacolor Military Prison. The company has no other duties save as guard at the prison, but that is most severe within itself, so much so that we had to be relieved of the town guard and other outside duties, etc. The men only get in one and two nights, going on guard every other day or in other words coming off one day and going on the next. As most of the prison guard is provost duty, as a consequence the men are on their feet all the time, for they surely do work the gags. There are also a few military prisoners here.

Well Thanksgiving has come and gone. The day was observed in all the American garrisons in the Philippines. We had one more good meal and it was duly appreciated, as we have been living hard for a long time. We had fried chicken, cranberries, sweet potatoes, peaches, rice pudding, radishes and a few other dainties. A very plain dinner at home, but not for one that has been living on bacon, rice, dried peaches and hard tack for so many months. Each man was given half a chicken. As for me I don't care for turkey, and I guess it is a good thing, especially when one is in this country. The U. S. commissary in quoting Christmas turkey gives that bird at 58 cents a pound, which makes the turkey quite a high priced bird in the Philippines.

There is considerable activity at present going on all over the islands. On Nov. 30th over 2,000 rebels surrendered in one body to Gen. Young at Santa Maria. They gave as their reasons for surrendering, the election of McKinley, the increase of American troops in their district and the deportation of prisoners on the part of Americans. Fully 5,000 Filipino soldiers have either surrendered or been taken prisoners during the past 30 days. A goodly number has also been killed and wounded. A large quantity of arms and other insurgent ordinance stores have also been captured and surrendered lately, but this is nothing, the same thing has been going on for the past 12 months, and yet the unequal struggle goes on. The navy department has decided not to withdraw any of the marines stationed in the Philippines at the present on account of the early withdrawal of the volunteer army, instead what other marines that can be spared from the United States and the other possessions will be sent to the Philippines. It is also given out that two battalions (eight companies) of the 10th infantry will be sent here in the near future from Porto Rico. There are now close to 70,000 American soldiers in the Philippines.

I understand that the government intends enlisting several thousand more Filipinos in the U. S. service. I have only read a brief of the president's message, but what I glean the president is very anxious for an increase in the army. Well there will be room for them over here when the volunteers leave. A large army will be required in the Philippines for years, I fear.

One year ago today the 41st was sailing along through the deserts of Egypt (to the Suez canal). A year ago yesterday we were at Port Said and on the night of Dec. 11 we anchored off Suez City. We were having a good time a year ago. Constantly on the move, but a year's service in the tropics will temper the toughest of them. Success to the I. J. and its many readers.

A little colored boy of nine years has been preaching a series of sermons in the A. M. E. Church in North Pleasureville that stamp him as a new century wonder. His knowledge of the Scriptures is said to be something remarkable in one so young. He uses good English and has plenty of language at his command. He is in earnest and makes a good impression on all who hear him. The white people who have heard him pronounce him a wonder.

The Department of Animal Industry at Washington City has stationed a veterinary inspector at the stock yards in Louisville to inspect cattle, sheep and hogs at the scales, placing Louisville on a footing with other large cities as to inspection of animals for food.
